It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

CHARLES MARVIN VORCE.

INTRODUCTION.

The foundation for this work was laid in 1865, when the author, during a brief visit home from the army, wrote down from the statements of his father, Rufus P. Vorce, a list of the Vorce family as known to the latter. It was then believed by both that, as was often asserted by Samuel Vorce, "all of the Vorses in this country are related," and it was supposed that the list then prepared was nearly complete to that time. Investigations prosecuted during the past four years have shown, however, that there is in this country a very large number of people descended from ancestors by the name of Vorce, none of whom were known to the descendants of Timothy Vorce of Dutchess county, 1746. Exhaustive research having failed to find the connecting link between all these various branches, if it exists, as seems probable, they are perforce treated separately. The descendants of Timothy Vorce, as the original starting point of the work, and the descendants of other branches, more or less completely traced but which appear to be probably consanguineous therewith form Part I. Families descended from ancestors named Vorce or Vorse, but whose connection with those of the first part has not yet been ascertained to be probable, form Part II. The record of related and intermarrying families forms Part III. In the Appendix are given some families not known to be related to any of those in Parts I and II, together with some items of historical and genealogical interest.

The nationality of the remote ancestors of the Vorce family is involved in doubt. By most persons the family is claimed to be of French, but by some of Dutch, descent. The great preponderance of family tradition is, however, in favor of the French ancestry. The conflicting traditions of French and Dutch ancestry might be reconciled by supposing the original French ancestors to have gone from France into Holland, and thence to England or America, as many French Huguenots did. This has seemed to the author the most probable solution, and accords well with all the facts known.

These various family traditions are here given for the light they may afford to any who may wish to prosecute the work of tracing out such of the families as are herein incompletely given.

The first tradition, which came to the author from several descendants of Timothy Vorce, is that the family was of French descent and the name was originally LaForce, being changed by dropping the La and converting the Force into Vorce, conformably to the pronounciation of their Dutch neighbors. This change is by some said to have only been completed about the period of the Revolution, and some support for this idea is found in the fact that in the history of Dutchess county a Timothy Force is given as living there in 1775, but no mention is made of any one by the name of Vorce or LaForce. A number of persons by the name of LaForce and Laforce are now living in Canada. A second tradition, coming from various descendants of "old Zebulon Vorce," is that the ancestor came from Holland to New Amsterdam, where "they were all Dutch together," and thence moved up the river to Dutchess county. Other descendants of Zebulon Vorce assert the French ancestry. According to them, Zebulon Vorce was a French Nobleman who came from France to America in the reign of Louis XIV on account of the wars then raging in France, and the confiscation of his property. He settled on Manhattan when there were but very few people there. His son Cary and an Astor were trappers, and had a trading post on the island. He owned a large tract of land on the island, built houses, and laid out village lots. In time, peace being declared in France, he was restored again to citizenship. He returned to France for several years, in the meantime his agent in Manhattan transacting his business for him. In his old age he again came to America, and found there had been great dishonesty going on, land having been sold and money, rents, etc. converted to the agent's gain. He was ill, being troubled with cancer, and did not push his claim at once. A specialist was sought out for him by his agent and called once and prescribed for the old man, and that was the last of him. He was quietly removed, his relatives thought.

A third tradition, coming from descendants of Allen Vorce, a descendant of Zebulon and an early resident of Yates county, N. Y., is that the family was of French descent and the name originally DeVorce, the De being dropped by the ancestor on coming from France to America.

A fourth tradition, emanating from John Vorce, of Eaton Rapids, Mich., is that their ancestors were three brothers by the name of Vorce who came from France to America, "banished for their religion." This seems to point clearly to a Huguenot ancestry; and it is further said that the three brothers came to Long Island, where it is known that a considerable number of Huguenot refugees did live.

John B. Vorce, a son of Sylvester Vorce, who lived in Dutchess county in 1785, also claimed to be of French descent, and supposed that the ancestral name "was probably DeVorce."

Finally it is found that a Huguenot named Adrien LaForce lived in Bushwick, on Long Island, in 1684, where he married a Dutch wife, one Jannetje Jans. Zebulon Vorce is said to have also married a Dutch wife, as many of the Huguenots are known to have done.

If in such a matter it were allowable to indulge in supposition, we might easily conclude that Adrien LaForce might have come to New Amsterdam from Holland, whither as a Huguenot refugee he had fled from France during the persecutions preceding the revocation of the Edict of Nantes, and that his descendants (and perhaps those of his unidentified brothers) had by 1746 removed to Dutchess county, as in 1775 we find Timothy Force, Benjamin Force, and Solomon Force recorded as residing in Dutchess county. The descendants of Benjamin Force (who also wrote his name Vorce), while claiming a French ancestry, supposed the name to have been originally spelled Force. But adhering to known facts and avoiding supposition, it must be admitted that so far no link connecting all the separate families who bore the name of Vorce or Vorse during the colonial period has been found.

A singular and somewhat remarkable fact is, that no help whatever in tracing the genealogy of the family has been derived from searches in all of the great libraries of the country, even with the aid of professional genealogists employed at considerable expense. A few scattered references to persons bearing the names of Vorce or Force were thus found, without any connected information as to their ancestry or descendants, but all of the information and every name contained in the body of the work (Parts I and II) has been obtained from bible records, private family lists, or the recollection of living persons.

The research will not end with the publication of this volume, but will be continued in the hope of eventually discovering the common ancestry of all the branches, and it is earnestly hoped that all persons to whose hand this work may come will communicate to the author any information they may have additional to that herein given regarding the Family or any person herein named. Correction of any errors or omissions found will be thankfully received, and it is hoped that the publication of this volume at this time will result in the accumulation of sufficient additional information to enable a supplement or second edition to be published at some future time, which shall be not only correct and complete but succeed in disclosing the remote ancestral origin of the family.

PART I.

TIMOTHY VORCE.

TIMOTHY VORCE, the first of this line whose relationship has been established with certainty, was born about 1719, but the locality of his birth has not been ascertained, although it was probably in Connecticut or Long Island. He married and before 1746 moved to Dutchess county, N. Y., where he was a farmer at that time. He was bitten by a rattlesnake and died from the bite in 1746, before the birth of his only child, Timothy Vorce, the second. No particulars regarding his wife have been discovered.

TIMOTHY VORCE, 2d.

TIMOTHY VORCE, the second, was born in Dutchess county, after his father's death, in 1746, the exact date not being ascertainable. He married ELIZABETH SIMPSON, of English descent but born in the colonies, probably in Connecticut. Their children were:

WILLIAM VORCE, born Aug. 27, 1779, in Dutchess county.

JEDEDIAH VORCE, born Jan. 31, 1781, in Dutchess county.

SAMUEL VORCE, born Jan. 28, 1783, in Dutchess county.

JOHN VORCE, born ———, 1785, in Dutchess.

AUDRIA VORCE and SOPHIA VORCE, twins, born Jan. 1, 1790, near Greenfield, Saratoga county, N. Y.

Timothy Vorce was a farmer, and during the Revolutionary War was at various times a member of the military organizations in Dutchess county which were employed in watching and repressing the Tories, who were numerous in Dutchess county and bold in consequence of the proximity of the British forces in New York and along the lower reaches of the Hudson. These organizations were of intermittent activity, their members being often allowed to remain at home to do necessary work on their farms until summoned to meet for some emergency. It was to an organization of this kind, and very possibly to the same one, that the three soldiers, Paulding, Williams and Van Wert, who arrested Major Andre, belonged. Many very interesting stories of his experiences in conflicts with the Tories were related by Timothy Vorce. On one occasion the company to which he belonged surprised and captured a band of some seventeen or twenty Tories who had assembled and were holding a meeting concealed in the top of an immense fallen tree whose foliage was reared upon to screen them from observation. The houses of the Tories were so well watched that an assemblage at any house was dangerous, hence they were compelled to resort to meeting in the woods and out of the way places.

About 1790 Timothy Vorce and family moved to Saratoga county, or, as some think, first, to Columbia county and thence to Saratoga county, where he settled near Greenfield. Land was then easily to be had upon lease or purchase from any of the large estates or patroons who at that time held immense tracts of land in the then unsettled interior of the state. Large families were an almost universal rule in those days; hence as soon as young people reached a marrying age, about twenty or twenty-one for young men and sixteen to nineteen for young women, they usually married and started out to make their own home. They took up land, built a log cabin, cleared land, and started in to battle with the hardships of pioneer life, which were so severe that few of the present day would dare to embark on such an undertaking. A vast amount of very hard labor was always to be done in clearing land and improving farms already cleared, so that the sturdy youth of that day could always find employment, although money was scarce, wages low, and often paid in property instead of money. Live stock of all kinds was a frequent medium for settling debts, and being indispensable to every householder was readily accepted in lieu of cash. But few horses were used, as oxen, although slower, were capable of harder work, and were the common animals for traction. In large families, some of the children were usually glad to find work in smaller families, as they thus acquired in a few years means or property sufficient to enable them to marry. The children of Timothy Vorce all married young: William at twenty-four, Jedediah at twenty-three, Samuel at twenty-one, John at twenty-one, Audria at sixteen, and Sophia at eighteen. Thus Timothy Vorce by 1808 found all his children married. William and Samuel had removed to Oswego county, and within a few years afterwards Timothy himself removed thither. His wife Elizabeth died about this time, but whether in Saratoga or Oswego county has not been ascertained. Timothy Vorce married a few years later a second wife, MERCY FRAZIER. Their only child was ZEBULON VORCE, born in Richland, Oswego county, in 1817, (1810?) exact date not ascertained.

Timothy Vorce died by drowning in August, 1830. He had been working in the harvest field cradling grain, and went into Salmon river for a swim to cool off. He was seized with cramps and drowned before help could reach him. Thus died this vigorous old man, at the age of eighty-four years, who, had he escaped such accident, bade fair to live at least ten or twelve years longer. He was a man of firm will, fearless courage and great physical vitality, qualities inherited in a marked degree by his sons. His wife Mercy died in 1834 at Pulaski, N. Y.

WILLIAM VORCE.

WILLIAM VORCE, eldest son of Timothy Vorce, 2d, was born in Dutchess county, near Athens, August 6, 1779; married, first, in Saratoga county in 1803, MERCY PRICE, [born February 16, 1783, at Tolland, Conn., third daughter of Col. Rufus Price. See Part III.]. William Vorce went to Oswego county, N. Y., in 1805 or 1807 and bought land in what is now Richland township. In 1809 he moved his family to Richland township, where he lived until about 1849, when he moved to Muir, Ionia county, Mich. He served in the War of 1812 in Capt. Meacham's company in the command of Gen. Carr. Soon after the close of the war William Vorce was appointed Collector of Customs at Port Ontario, at the mouth of Salmon river. He was the first collector at that port, and continued in office until about 1849. He was also the first Justice of the Peace in Richland township and held the office for many years. He died at the home of his eldest son, Timothy Vorce, in Muir, November 21, 1857. Mercy Vorce, the first wife of William, died in Richland, October 10, 1814. Their children were:

TIMOTHY VORCE, born April 11, 1805, at Milton, N. Y.

HENRY VORCE, born ———, 1807, at Milton, N. Y.

GRACE VORCE, born ———, 1809, died unm. 1830 at Port Ontario, N. Y.

PAMELIA VORCE, born May —, 1811, at Port Ontario.

JULIA VORCE, born ———, 1813, at Port Ontario.

WILLIAM VORCE married, second, in 1816, MARY BUNN [born at Amsterdam, N. Y.; died May 1, 1880, at Richland]. Their children were:

ABNER VORCE, born Nov. 24, 1817, at Port Ontario.

LAURA VORCE, born Dec. 5, 1819, at Port Ontario.

CHAUNCEY VORCE, born Aug. 6, 1821, at Port Ontario.

GRACE VORCE, born Aug. 15, 1833, at Port Ontario.

TIMOTHY VORCE, eldest son of Wm. Vorce, married Dec. 24, 1832, at Richland, DELILAH THAYER [born Dec. 24, 1813, at Amsterdam; died Sept. 24, 1878, at Muir, daughter of Lockwood Thayer and Mary Bunn]. Their children were:

WILLIAM GRANT VORCE, born Aug. 31, 1838, died March 20, 1843, at Richland.

FRANCES VORCE, born Oct. 22, 1845, at Oswego.

HIRAM VORCE, born Sept. 10, 1847, at Pulaski.

TIMOTHY VORCE.

Timothy Vorce sailed on the lakes for many years and was known as one of the most fearless and determined masters on the lakes. It is related of him that on one occasion he sailed into Oswego with his schooner loaded with split staves, her deckload being nearly even with the top of the rail. A longshoremen's strike was in progress, and being unwilling to pay the price demanded, he set his crew at unloading the deckload, whereupon the longshoremen assaulted the crew and drove them back on board the vessel, whither a number of the strikers followed and by threats of violence drove the crew into the forecastle. Captain Vorce at this juncture came on deck, and, perceiving the situation, ordered the rioters to go ashore, which they, confident in their numbers, refused to do. Without another word he picked up a heavy handspike and struck right and left among them, knocking two of them overboard into the river, and singlehanded driving the whole crowd ashore. The crew then reappeared on deck, and the city marshal with a posse appearing on the dock, the disturbance was quelled and the unloading proceeded with. An amusing story of his childhood well illustrates his character. When a boy of eight or nine years he had found an old fish-spear lost by some fisherman, and delighted to roam along the river spearing the fish found in the overflow pools and creeks, usually taking his younger brother Henry with him. His mother, fearing some accident would befall them, forbade his going, but threats and even punishment failed to deter him, so she undertook to scare him out of it, and on seeing the boys start off in the direction of the river she took a short cut and getting ahead of them concealed herself among some bushes by which they would pass. As the boys approached she emitted a lugubrious groan, to which Timothy paid not the slightest attention, but which startled little Henry, who, in a trembling whisper, asked; "Tim, what's that?" "I don't know," answered Tim, "come along." At this moment came a second groan or shriek which so scared Henry that he stopped, whimpering "Oh Tim! what is that?" Tim, without pausing or even looking around, answered "I don't know; 'taint nothin' at'll hurt ye, come along." The boys were now directly opposite their mother's hiding place, and as a last effort she gave the most unearthly screech she was able to. This fairly terrified little Henry, who burst into tears and flew to his brother's side, shrieking out, "Tim! Tim! I'm afraid, what is it?" Turning angrily upon him Tim seized him by the arm, exclaiming testily, "Come along, ye little fool! I don't know what 'tis, nor I don't care; if it's the devil I'll spear him." This ended the attempt to scare Timothy.

In 1849 Timothy Vorce abandoned sailing and settled at Muir, Mich., where he lived until his death, which occurred March 14, 1887.

CAPTAIN JOHN VORCE.

JOHN VORCE.

JOHN VORCE, the fourth son of Timothy Vorce, was born in 1785. The exact date and place of his birth has not been ascertained, but it seems probable that he was born in Dutchess county. By about 1790, however, he was living in Saratoga county. For some years before coming of age he worked for and lived in the family of Silas Adams, at Milton Hill, Saratoga county, New York. In 1806 John Vorce married Annis, the eldest (?) daughter of Silas Adams, and lived in Milton until about 1812 or 1813, when he removed to Richmond township, Oswego county, New York.

In the "History of Oswego County" it is said: "Capt. John Vorce settled in Richland at an early date." This means Richland township, and not the present village of Richland. His daughter Lydia was born here. He sailed most of the time until about 1823 or 1824, when he moved back to Milton on account of his wife's health and the increasing age of her parents. He lived there on or near the Adams farm, caring for Silas Adams and his wife, until after the marriage of his daughter Priscilla in 1830. His wife, Annis Adams Vorce, died in 1825, and thereafter until her marriage his daughter Priscilla kept house for him. After the marriage of Priscilla, Capt. John Vorce removed to Cleveland, Ohio, and thereafter until their death Silas Adams and his wife were cared for by their grandson, Hermon Thomas, who received the Adams farm as his recompense.

After leaving Milton, John Vorce married (at Cleveland?) his second wife, Sarah Smith, and continued sailing until the latter part of the '40s (about 1848?), when he quit sailing and settled in Wickliffe, Lake county, Ohio, where he kept a tavern and a general store on the Euclid Road, then the stage route between Buffalo and Cleveland. Here he was familiarly known to everybody as "Uncle John." The opening of the railroad from Erie to Toledo soon killed the tavern business, and about the breaking out of the Civil War "Uncle John" gave up the tavern and retired to a small farm near by, in the center of the present village of Wickliffe, upon which he built a residence wherein he lived until his death, which occurred August 11, 1866. Soon after or about the time of his retirement from the lakes, Captain Vorce's wife, familiarly known to all as "Aunt Sally," became demented, although tractable and harmless, and was always tenderly cared for in the family, being an object of especial solicitude to her husband during his life, and after that to his youngest son, Henry Vorce, who came home from California a year or two before his father's death for the express purpose of taking care of him and "Aunt Sally" during their lives. She died in 1871.

At the time Capt. John Vorce settled in Wickliffe, the country was full of small game, the thick woods which still covered considerable portions of the country especially abounding in squirrels, and inconceivably immense flocks of wild pigeons filling the air during spring and fall. Hunting squirrels was a particularly favorite sport with "Uncle John," and one that he was always ready to indulge in. He possessed an old-fashioned small-bore rifle of exceptional length and weight, which was always in demand at the Thanksgiving and Christmas turkey shootings which formed an invariable feature of such holidays at that time. With this weapon "Uncle John" was a crack shot, and disdained to shoot a squirrel otherwise than through the head, although he was upwards of sixty years of age. As late as 1855, when he was seventy years old and quite fleshy, the author has seen "Uncle John" spend a full half day tramping the woods with a party of friends and returning with a "back load" of squirrels, every one shot cleanly through the head. It was not an uncommon feature for him to shoot wild pigeons through the head, and when shooting at a chicken, duck or turkey the head was always his mark.

It is related of Capt. John Vorce that once on coming into Oswego the owners of the schooner he sailed ordered her painted black. Capt. John, having always kept her painted white or green, objected, but the owners were inflexible, and she was painted black; whereupon Capt. John threw up his position as her master and secured the command of another vessel whose owners allowed him to keep his vessel painted to suit himself. The children of John Vorce were:

PART III.

INTERMARRYING FAMILIES.

ADAMS FAMILY.

RICHARD ADAMS, of Preston (Eng.?), bought a tract of three thousand acres in Mortlake (now Brooklyn Twp.), Windham county, Conn., known as the Adams tract, in 1701. His son RICHARD ADAMS, JR., married a daughter of Daniel Cady, of Aspinock (now Killingly), and settled on the Adams tract in 1703; he was the first settler in Mortlake. Richard Adams, Sr., died in 1712, and the Adams tract was divided between his seven children, Richard, Jr., receiving one quarter of the Adams tract. Richard Adams, Jr., died in 1738, and his sons, Richard and Peter, each received half of his land. Peter Adams' son, PETER ADAMS, JR., born in 1718, married in Brooklyn in 1750, PRISCILLA WARREN (born about 1728, a descendent of Richard Warren of the Mayflower). Their children, all born in Brooklyn, were:

Philemon Adams, born 1751; Phebe Adams, born 1753; Jeremiah Adams, born 1755; SILAS ADAMS, born April 30, 1758; Abijah Adams, born 1760; Priscilla Adams, born 1762; Benoni Adams, born 1764; Ephraim Adams, born 1767; Lois Adams, born 1769; Simeon Adams, born 1771; Elisha Adams, born 1774; Dorcas Adams, born 1776.

In Larned's History of Windham County, Conn., Vol. 2, page 252, it is stated that four sons of Peter Adams, after fighting through the Revolutionary war, removed to new countries. The eldest son, Philemon, with some of his younger brothers, engaged in running a linseed oil mill and in the manufacture of potash and pottery. Another son was a silversmith and worker in silver; and one of the daughters of Peter Adams, using wooden stamps cut out by her brothers and dyes manufactured by herself from native plants, produced a successful imitation of flowered brocades, then much in fashion for dress patterns, vests and furniture covers. These brocades were printed upon homespun cloth woven in the family. Indian families still occupied wigwams in the uncleared forest on portions of the Adams tract.

Peter Adams, who from his youth had been reputed a great hunter, in 1780 killed the last bear ever seen in Windham county. At this period it is said of Peter Adams' family—"Living remote from neighbors on a large tract of land, this family long retained primitive characteristics and habits, a patriarchal community almost independent of the busy world beyond them."

Philemon and Jeremiah Adams, the two elder sons of Peter Adams, were in the Revolutionary army. In the summer of 1776(?) they were allowed to go home during the harvest season to aid their father in reaping, on condition of two of their younger brothers taking their place in the army. Silas and his younger brother Abijah, lads of about 18 and 16 years of age, took their brothers' places, and were sent to New London Conn. Silas was appointed gunsmith and remained in the army until the close of the war, soon after which he removed to Dutchess county, N. Y., whither many families from Windham county removed, chiefly to the Oblong and the Nine Partners. Silas Adams married in Dutchess county, Lydia Gay, born at Sharon, Conn., a grand-daughter of Luther Gay, who lived in Dutchess county. She was left an orphan at an early age and brought up in the family of her grandfather. The children of Silas and Lydia Adams were:

Annis Adams, born 1783(?); died in 1825.

Laura Adams, born March 24, 1784; died in 1846.

Which of these daughters was the elder is uncertain. It has been reported to the author that Annis was the elder; but as both were married in their teens, and the date of Laura's marriage is given as 1803, while Annis is said to have been married in 1805, it appears probable that Laura was the elder, although Annis is reported to have been born in Dutchess county.

Silas Adams lived in Dutchess county until after his first child was born. With his household effects loaded upon a sled drawn by a yoke of steers, Silas with his wife and baby (Annis?) started in the winter of 1784 or 1785 for Saratoga county. They reached Milton Hill in the following February (1785?). Here Silas Adams, then twenty-seven years old, built a log cabin and cleared land, that country being then very sparsely settled. Here their second child was born. The family endured great privations and hardships during the early part of their abode there, but these were lightened as the country became more settled, and they prospered increasingly as time went on. In 1798 Silas Adams built a large frame house at Milton, which he occupied as a homestead until his death in 1854, when he was nearly ninety-seven years of age. (See p. 23.)

COON.

Timothy Coon enlisted 1777, in Capt. Abner Prior's company from Connecticut. Hans Jerick Coons was living in Dutchess county in 1710.

CORBIN.

Moses Corbin came to the United States and settled at Whitehall, N. Y., before the Revolution.

DELANO FAMILY. (See Warren.)

This family, as traced in the Delano genealogy, goes back in various lines from about the middle of the twelfth century to various very early sources, viz: to Guelph, prince of the Scyri, A. D. 476; to Priam, king of the Franks, A. D. 382; to the emperor Charlemagne, A. D. 800; and to the Norman ancestors of William the Conqueror, A. D. 860, etc. As the Norman descent is the most interesting it is here given, partly from the above genealogy.

ROLF, or Hrolf (called also Rollo and Rou), a Scandinavian Viking, grandson of Earl Rognwald, of Moeri, in Norway, captured Rouen in A. D. 911, and conquered the surrounding country. In 912 Hrolf married Gisela, daughter of Charles "the Simple," the Carolingian king of France; was baptized as a Christian under the name of Robert, and was granted by Charles the feudal tenure of the country occupied by Hrolf. This was the creation of the duchy of Normandy.

WILLIAM "Longsword," son of Hrolf, duke of Normandy, 927-942.

RICHARD, "the Fearless," son of William Longsword, duke of Normandy, 943-996.

RICHARD, "the Good," son of Richard the Fearless, duke of Normandy, 996-1026.

ROBERT, "the Devil," second son of Richard the Good, duke of Normandy 1028-1035.

WILLIAM "the Conqueror," son of Robert le Diable, duke of Normandy 1035-1087, married Matilda, [daughter of Baldwin, Earl of Flanders, and a descendant of Alfred the Great]. William invaded England in 1066 and conquered the kingdom, the "Norman Conquest" of England. His son

HENRY "Beauclerc" became king of England in 1100 as Henry I; married Matilda, [daughter of Malcolm, king of Scotland, and a great granddaughter of Edmund "Ironside"]. Henry's daughter Matilda married (1) Henry V of Germany, emperor of the Holy Roman Empire; after his death married (2) Geoffry "Plantagenet," count of Anjou, son of Fulk, king of Jerusalem. Their son

HENRY, count of Anjou and duke of Normandy, succeeded to the throne of England in 1154, as Henry II; married Eleanor of Aquitaine; their daughter Matilda married Henry V, "the Lion," duke of Saxony and Bavaria.

HENRY VI, eldest son of Henry the Lion, duke of Saxony, married (1193) Agnes, Countess Palatine, [daughter of Conrad, count of the Palatinate, niece of the Emperor Frederick I of Germany and a cousin of the reigning emperor].

AGNES, their daughter married OTHO (son of Louis I), the "Iron Duke" of Bavaria.

AGNES, their daughter married (1245) HELLIN I, count and marquis de Franchimont (a seignury in Normandy). Their son

HELLIN II, Marquis de Franchimont, married Agnes, daughter of Gysbert, count of Duras. Their son

JEAN DE FRANCHIMONT, married (1310?) Mahienne de Lannoy (a seignury in Flanders). Their son

HUGUES DE LANNOY, Sieur de Santes, governor of Holland, married (1329), Marguerite de Maingoval. Their son

GUILLEBERT DE LANNOY, Sieur de Willerval, and de Beaumont, governor of Holland, married Catherine de Molembais. Their son

BAUDOUIN DE LANNOY, Sieur de Molembais, etc., "le Begue," governor of Lille, Toison d'Or, married Adrienne de Berlaymont. Their son

BOUDOUIN DE LANNOY, Sieur de Molembais, Toison d'Or, governor of Sutphen, married Michelle d'Esne, etc. Their son

PHILLIPPE DE LANNOY, de Molembais, de Tourcoing, etc., Toison d'Or, and Chamberlain to the Emperor Charles V, married Magdelaine de Burgundy. Their son

JEAN DE LANNOY, Sieur de Molembais, etc., etc. Toison d'Or, married Jeanne de Ligne of Barbancon. Their son

GYSBERT DE LANNOY, born 1545, at Turcoing, "the Huguenot," abandoned the Catholic faith of his ancestors and embraced the Protestant faith, for which, at his father's death he was disinherited. His son

JEAN DE LA NOYE, married at Leyden (1596), Marie le Mahieu, from Brabant. Their son

PHILLIPPE DE LA NOYE, born at Leyden, 1602, came to Plymouth in 1621 in the Fortune; married (1634), Esther Dewsbury. Their son

JOANATHAN DELANO, married Mercy Warren in 1678. Their son

JONATHAN DELANO, born 1679, married Amy Hatch, 1704. Their daughter

JOANNA DELANO, born 1706, married JOSEPH WEST, 1725. Their daughter

MERCY WEST, born 1726, married ADONIRAM GRANT, 1747.

The ancestry of the house of Lannoy is also traced from Agnes, countess Palatine, who married Henry the VI, duke of Saxony, to Conrad the Red, and through his wife Luitgarde to Cerdic, king of Wessex, A. D. 495, through Alfred the Great, of England.

DUNNING.

Benjamin Dunning, who lived in Jamaica, L. I., before the Revolution, had a son

Benjamin Dunning, who was born about 1680, and had a son David Dunning, born in Bridgeport, Conn., in 1711. His son Silas Dunning was born in Brookfield, Conn., May 6, 1755, and his son

Ira Dunning was born in Salem, N. Y., in 1789.

W. Dunning was sheriff of Orange county, province of New York, in 1738.

GRANT FAMILY.

Matthew Grant, born October 27, 1601, in Dorsetshire, England, married there November 16, 1825; Priscilla ———, born February 27, 1601. They came to Massachusetts in the "Mary and John" May 30, 1630, and settled at Dorchester; removed to Windsor, Conn., in 1635, one of the pioneers of that settlement, and he became one of its leading citizens; was town clerk for twenty-five years; died there December 16, 1681. Their eldest son was:

Samuel Grant, born November 12, 1631, at Dorchester, married May 27, 1658, at Windsor, Mary Porter, born 1638, in England. Their eldest son was:

Samuel Grant, born April 20, 1659, at Windsor; married (2) April 11, 1688, at Stonington, Grace Miner, born September 20, 1670, at Stonington. Their second son was:

Noah Grant, born December 16, 1693, at Windsor, married June 12, 1717, at Tolland, Martha Huntington, born December 9, 1696, at Norwich. Noah died October 10, 1727, at Tolland. Their second son was:

Adoniram Grant, born February 17, 1721, at Tolland; married October 8, 1747, at Tolland, Mercy West, born 1725 at Tolland (daughter of Joseph West and Joanna Delano). Adoniram died January 30, 1783; Mercy died July 25, 1806. The only daughter and youngest child of Noah Grant was:

Martha Grant, born June 9, 1726, at Tolland, married September 17, 1750, at Coventry, Rufus Price, born in 1724. The third daughter of Adoniram and Mercy (West) Grant was:

Ruth Grant, born November 19, 1759, at Tolland; married May 7, 1778, at Tolland, Lieut. Rufus Price, born August 5, 1751, at Coventry (son of Rufus Price and Martha Grant-Price). He was an aide on Gen. Washington's staff. Rufus died September 1, 1829, at Richland Twp., Oswego county, N. Y., Ruth died July 6, 1849, at same place. The third daughter of Rufus and Ruth Price was Mercy Price, born February 16, 1783, at Tolland; married William Vorce (see p. 8); died October 10, 1814. The fourth daughter of Rufus and Ruth Price was Martha Price, born January 18, 1787, at Tolland; married Samuel Vorce (see p. 18); died January 16, 1839.

The genealogy of Gen. Ulysses S. Grant, from Noah Grant, (the father of Adoniram) is: Noah Grant, 2d, (eldest brother of Adoniram) married Susannah Delano.

Noah Grant, 3rd, eldest son of Noah Grant, 2nd, married, (2) Mrs. Rachel Kelly, at Greensburgh, Pa.

Jesse Root Grant, eldest son of Noah Grant and Rachel Kelly, married Hannah Simpson.

The eldest son of Jesse Root Grant was Hiram Ulysses Grant, changed to Ulysses Simpson Grant, who became general of the army and President of the United States.

IRISH.

In 1775 there were three farmers living in Beekman precinct, Dutchess county, by the name of Irish, all Quakers, viz:

Jesse Irish, David Irish, William Irish; some or all of them doubtless related to Jedediah Irish (page 61).

PRICE FAMILY.

The ancestry of MERCY PRICE, who married William Vorce, and of MARTHA PRICE, who married Samuel Vorce is, in part, as follows:

Through Ruth Grant, their mother, to Matthew Grant. See Grant Family.

Through Mercy West, their grandmother, to William de Warrenne. (See Warren Family.)

Through Joanna Delano, their great grandmother, to Rolf. See Delano Family.

Various other ancestral branches which have been traced are omitted for want of space.

SIMPSON.

There were many families named Simpson in the Colonies prior to the Revolution. Many of the Simpsons were Tories, and a number of families by that name were banished from the colony of Massachusetts Bay, as Royalists, during the Revolution. A number of persons by the name of Elizabeth Simpson are recorded, but none could be the same who married Timothy Vorce about 1770. The Simpsons were also numerous in Connecticut before and during the Revolution, and were mostly adherents to the cause of the Colonies. Caleb Simpson lived in Dutchess county, and there was a Garret Simpson enrolled in Cooper's Rangers from Dutchess county. James Simpson and Timothy Force both signed the petition for erection of Skenesborough into a county town in 1775, and it is undoubtedly one of these families from which the wife of Timothy Vorce descended.

SPICER.

Peter Spicer, was one of the volunteers to whom in 1700 the township of Voluntown, Windham county, Conn., was granted.

WARREN FAMILY.

This family descends from GUILLIAUME DE WARRENNE, a count of Normandy who came to England with William the Conqueror, and was one of the most noted nobles in the Norman army; was greatly distinguished at the battle of Senlac (Hastings), and after the conquest was made by the Conqueror one of his most powerful earls, being given the earldom of Surrey and many other lordships.

The Colonies in 1719.

APPENDIX.

The situation of the American colonists at the time this record begins, in the year 1719, is graphically shown by the accompanying map. At that time Spain held Florida and Mexico, and, having explored the Pacific coast, claimed all the country northward from Mexico to an indefinite extent. Spanish settlements extended up the Rio Grande valley and central New Mexico beyond Sante Fe, and into lower Texas and lower California, but were few in number and scattered at wide intervals. Nevertheless the sphere of Spanish domination included what is now Texas and all of the California coast. In Florida the few Spanish settlements at St. Augustine, Pensacola, etc., gave assured dominion of the peninsula, and from having explored the country south of Tennessee from the Savannah river to the Mississippi, and having mined for gold in Georgia, Spain claimed the territory as far north as the Savannah river, and actually dominated that region.

France, by virtue of the explorations of the Jesuit missionaries in the valleys of the St. Lawrence, Ohio and Mississippi rivers and about the great lakes, her settlements along the St. Lawrence, and her chain of Jesuit missions at Detroit, Mackinac, Chicago, Kaskaskia and New Orleans, claimed all the territory in North America except that actually occupied by the Spanish settlements and the narrow fringe of English settlements along the coast from Savannah to the Penobscot river, excepting Acadia and Hudson's Bay, which she had ceded to England in 1713. The sphere of French influence, however, owing to the activity of the Jesuit explorers and missionaries, was much the more extensive, and dominated the St. Lawrence valley, Canada, the region about the great lakes, and the Mississippi valley. All of the interior of the country, however, from a little west of Albany to the Pacific coast and from the gulf to beyond the great lakes was in the actual possession of the Indian tribes.

The British crown claimed all of North America from latitude 34 degrees to 45 degrees, and had granted it "from sea to sea," but the British sphere of influence was limited substantially to the territory actually settled under British grants, and to the region in central New York occupied by the Five Nations of Indians, who were less friends of the English than bitter enemies of the French. The actual settlements of the colonists under British grants were confined to the region closely bordering the coast, from about Portsmouth, N. H., to Savannah, Ga., and extended but a few leagues from the coast, except in New England, where they extended westward nearly to the Hudson river, but were mostly small and widely scattered in the inland portions. There was no settlement in New York westward of Schenectady, nor in Pennsylvania west of Harrisburgh; New Orleans had been settled by the French in the preceding year, and the first trading post was established at Oswego by the English in the following year, 1720. The western part of Massachusetts and northern part of Connecticut were only settled by a few pioneers located miles apart in the wilderness, which was still occupied by the Indians, while northern New Hampshire and all of Vermont was yet an unbroken wilderness, as was all of northern New York north of the Mohawk valley. This was the extent of the development of the colonies at the end of the first century after the first settlement at Plymouth. How little this situation had changed up to the time of the French and Indians wars may be seen from the map of North America (from the Pittsburg Dispatch) which shows the situation in 1750.

CONFUSION OF NAMES.

The difficulty of tracing names during the colonial period, and especially names of foreign origin, is greatly increased by the confusion introduced where names were translated, as was often done. A most singular instance of this confusion is given in Furman's History of Long Island regarding the name of one Feyerston, a Scotchman, who settled among Dutch neighbors who translated his name, as if it were Firestone, into Feuerstein, but this name was again translated by his later English neighbors into Flint, by which family name his children were known. One of the children moved to Canada, where his French neighbors again translated Flint into Pierre-a-fusil (gun-stone), and upon his return many years later to the locality where his father had lived, his translated name of Pierre-a-fusil was again translated and became Peter Gun.

An additional source of confusion is the carelessness and ignorance of spelling common names during the colonial period, and even afterwards, combined with the rude independence of that time which led those who had occasion to speak or write an unfamiliar name to promptly guess at it rather than take the least trouble to find out the real sound or spelling of the name. Examples of this habit are seen in the following variations of spelling of Ticonderoga taken from the reports of various officers during the French and Indian War; some of whom spelled the name six different ways in the same document. The spellings noticed were: Tionduroque, Toronduroque, Tycondarogue, Atianderogoe, Tianderrogoe, Tiandrogo, Tionderogo, Tianarago, Tiandaroga, Tenondorogo, Tiondarog, Tiondorogo,

In one paper—

Diontarogo, Diandorogo, Diontorogo,
Diondaroga, Tuyondaroga, Diondarog,
Tiantiroga, Tocondoroga, Tjondaroge, Tyconderoga.

In family names the same confusion is found. The name of the same person is spelled sometimes koert van Voorhees and sometimes Kourten Van Fores, in the same rolls. The name Gillespie is spelled Galesby, Glispy, and Clisby by different writers referring to the same person. The name of one man is spelled Howlet, Halet and Houldt in the same document, and there are innumerable other instances of similar confusions in spelling.

Even at the present day misspelling of the name Vorce is very common when it is written by those unfamiliar with its correct spelling. The following forms have come to the notice of the author where the name has been written down by various persons from the oral pronunciation of it, viz: Vors, Vorse, Force, Borce, Bors, Fours, Fowers, Bores, Vores, Fores, Voys, Vorts, Vorch, and Wors.

Jeremiah Vorse and Hannah, his wife, lived in Stoughton, Mass., and had at least two children, Nathaniel, (see below) and Jerusha Vorse, daughter of Jeremiah Vorse, of Stoughton.

Jesse Vorce, was a corporal in the 7th Company of Connecticut Volunteers; discharged December 29, 1775.

Joseph Vorce, in Mansfield's company from Derby, Conn., served three years in the Revolution.

Lemuel Vorce, in Revolutionary army. (Conn. Records, Vol. 12, p. 52.)

Mary Vors married Samuel Maghee, August 28, 1766.

Nathaniel Vorse (also spelled Vose), a son of Jeremiah Vorse, of Stoughton, Mass.

Nicholas Vorce and Mary Bourn married at Taunton, Mass., March 30, 1710.

Rebecca Vorse, of Walpole, N. H., married John S. Marcy, March 7, 1779. They resided at Windsor, Vt.

Samuel C. Vorse, of Barre, Vt., Company C, 1st Vermont Cav., 1863.

Thomas Vorse, resided in Rombout precinct, Dutchess county, in 1775. Named as executor in the will of Gideon Verveelen of that precinct.

William H. Vorce, of Vernon, Vt., Company H, 11th Vermont Vols., 1864.

Cornelis Dircksen Vos, from Leyden, with his wife, mother and two children, came to New Netherland, in the ship "The St. John Baptist," in May, 1661.

Petrus Vos was a minister of the Protestant Reformed Dutch Church at Kingston in Ulster county (opposite Rhinebeck), in 1712, as appears by his petition with others dated May 1, 1712, for the incorporation of said church. The petition of Vos and others was referred by the governor to a committee composed of Rip Van Dam and others at New York, who reported May 2, 1712, that in their opinion the governor might properly grant "ye Petition of Petrus Vas and others."

Peter Voss was a settler on the Hoseck (Hoosac) Grant, east of the Hudson river in 1764, and was turned out of possession by agents of New Hampshire in August.

Balthaser de Vos came from Utrecht with his wife in the ship "Hope" in April 1662.

Hendrick Bos, from Leyden, came with his wife and two children in the ship "Faith," in December, 1659.

Yan Voes and John Marshall were among the signers of the petition for the removal of Sheriff Wm. Cosby in 1737.

In the New York militia in 1738 are found the names of David De Voor, John De Voor, Tunis De Vour and Petter A. Voatts.

Edict of Nantes, issued by Henry IV, April 13, 1598, conceding political and religious rights to the Huguenots and putting them on a political equality with Catholics. Freedom of worship guaranteed to the Huguenots except in Paris and the Episcopal cities. In 1685, Louis XIV ("Le Grand") revoked the edict of Nantes. At least 50,000 Huguenot families fled from France during the persecutions which preceded and followed the revocation of the edict.

In 1714, a "List of the inhabitants and slaves in the county of Dutchess" was made. The white inhabitants numbered 416, and the slaves 29, a total population of 445. The only names in the list at all resembling any of those given in Parts I and II are those of John and Abram Beuys and Peter De Boyes.

The total population of Dutchess county in 1738, including children and slaves, was 3,086, "in the whole county except the High Lands." The total whites in the whole county was stated at 3,156, and total blacks at 262; whence it may be deduced that the dwellers in the Highlands numbered 332.

In the enrollment of the people called "Quakers" for Dutchess county in 1775, are the names of Shearman, Chase, Dakin, Russell, Ferris, Howland, Irish, Gifford; most of whom are given the description "farmer."

EXPLANATORY.

In the body of the work (parts I and II) all particulars regarding the persons named which it has been possible to obtain by persistent correspondence have been given. Names followed by an asterisk (*) indicate persons who have failed to answer repeated letters. A greatly to be regretted ignorance of the whereabouts and family history of relatives has been disclosed on the part of very many persons, but it is gratifying to state that in general, correspondents have been very obliging in giving all such information as they possessed.

The present residence of living adult persons is in general to be understood as being at the locality of marriage or birth of youngest child. Adults of whom neither marriage or death is recorded are understood to be still living and unmarried, or that no information on the subject can be obtained. Where dates or localities are followed by different data in parenthesis, it indicates that different persons give different dates, etc. for the same event.
